A table of parking rates and options for visitors and passengers at Seattle's SeaTac (SEA) International Airport.

About SeaTac Airport

There was a courageous band of populists in the early 1900s who recognized Seattle's natural deep-water port was an asset and resource that should belong to the people. In March, 1911, the Washington State Legislature initiated laws permitting establishment of port districts. By September, King County voters approved creation of the Port of Seattle, the first public port of the state.

Today, the Port of Seattle's is unique in its scope. From its vital cargo and passenger seaport and airport, to the home for the North Pacific fishing fleet, to first-class public marinas and conference facilities, to parks surrounding Elliot Bay. The Port of Seattle plays a significant role in bringing international trade, transportation and travel to the Pacific Northwest, and is also a key builder of road and rail infrastructure, partnering with other agencies to improve freight traffic from Tacoma to Everett.

The Port owns and operates Seattle-Tacoma International Airport – the nation's 17th busiest – handling more than 31.5 million passengers in 2010. The Port's passenger cruise terminals at Pier 66 and Smith Cove Terminal will handle 195 ship calls and an estimated 800,000 passengers during the 2011 season. State-of-the-art cargo handling facilities helped rank Seattle as the nation's 6th busiest U.S. seaport in 2010, serving 22 international steamship lines moving more than 2.1 million TEUs (20-foot equivalent unit containers). The Port also operates four public marinas, and manages a number of real estate assets for financial return and broad economic advantage.

The Port's vision is to be the nation's leading green and energy-efficient port. Our tagline, "Where a sustainable world is headed" to communicate that goal. The Puget Sound region already meets federal air quality standards, and the Port's numerous environmental programs are designed for real benefits to the community and a competitive edge for our customers.

SeaTac Airport Accessibility Services

Accommodations for Persons with Disabilities and Special Needs

The SeaTac airport is fully equipped with special access facilities to provide all travelers. Meeters, greeters and airport employees all have a safe, convenient means of getting around.

Services In the Airport

Curbside Services

Some airlines do offer curbside check-in during peak periods. Travelers should check directly with their carrier about available check-in services. No parking or waiting allowed on the airport drives at any time. Vehicles left unattended, even if the driver is nearby, will be ticketed and towed. A good alternative to loading and unloading on the drives is to use the Airport Garage.

Elevators

All elevators in the Main Terminal, Satellites and Parking Garage have Braille and raised numerals inside. Additionally, all elevators have lowered control panels, floor-passing gongs, raised call buttons, Braille on the doorjamb and directional arrows in the elevator lobbies.

Security

Heightened Security

New security procedures at airports affect everyone. That includes travelers with special needs including a child traveling alone and/or a traveler with a disability. Special needs travelers should do some advance planning and strategizing.

- - Parking for travelers with disabilities is available on either the fourth floor (Terminal Direct Parking) or fifth floor (General Parking) of the airport parking garage
- - Lines at security checkpoints can be very long. Travelers who have problems standing for long periods may want to arrange for wheelchair service with their airlines. Rental wheelchairs and baby strollers also are available in the airport from Ken's Baggage and Frozen Food Storage. Ken's is located on the Baggage Claim level under the escalator bank between carousels 12 and 13. Call them at 206 433-5333 for more information.
- - Only ticketed passengers are allowed past security checkpoints. However, many airlines are issuing special "companion passes" to non-travelers assisting travelers with disabilities or children traveling alone that allow them to accompany passengers with special needs to the gates. Travelers should check directly with the airlines they are traveling on to see what options are available.

- - Allowing extra time at the airport is a must. Travelers should account for the additional time needed to get from the relocated parking areas for travelers with disabilities as well as the longer wait times at both ticket counters and security check points.
- - If you have any medical devices, such as syringes or special apparatus that might be questioned at the security checkpoint, you should check with your airline in advance of the flight to confirm requirements. Under FAA regulations, diabetics who need to fly with syringes or insulin delivery systems should carry a vial of insulin with a professional, pharmaceutical preprinted label which clearly identifies the medication. Because of the possibility of forgery, prescriptions and letters of medical necessity will not be accepted.

SeaTac Airport Check In Options

Shortening your time in airline ticket counter lines is always a great strategy for travelers. New technology offers two options for SeaTac travelers.

Alaska Airlines "Airport of the Future" Customer Check-In Facility. Alaska's facility features customer-friendly islands of check-in kiosks and bag-check stations. Customers may print their boarding passes and bag check tags at the check-in kiosks. Passengers with only carry-on baggage can proceed directly to the security checkpoint. Passengers with luggage to check proceed to one of the bag-check points, where customer service employees accept bags with tags printed by the passenger.

Checking In for Flights in Sea-Tac's Garage. Travelers on seven airlines – Alaska Airlines / Horizon Air, Delta Air Lines, Continental, American, United, Hawaiian, and Korean Airlines - can check in and print their boarding pass right as they enter the airport from the parking garage. The quick check-in kiosks enable travelers without luggage to print their boarding pass and head straight for the security checkpoint and their departure gate. Travelers with luggage on Alaska Airlines and Horizon Air can get their boarding pass bags tags then take their luggage right to their airline's bag drop area. Lufthansa and British Airways passengers will be able to use the kiosks in January 2012.

The quick check-in kiosks are located on the fourth floor of the garage at the entrances to Skybridges 2 through 6.
